APPLICANT'S COMMENTS

Applicant has added new claims to include the following elements in independent claim 26:

making said stepout payments automatically to said research broker without providing said research broker information related to trade execution; [instant claim 1; element 5]

New independent claim 39 also comprises the element:

*notifying said research broker of said step-out payments over set period of time payable to said research broker without disclosure of said commission payment made to said executing broker.
[instant claim 39; element 6]*

In the Office Action of January 7, 2008, the Examiner cited BrokerShare as disclosing commission sharing that maintains confidentiality, “so your trading strategy will not be revealed to brokers receiving your commissions.” [Office Action: Jan 7, 2008; page 11; lines 19 – 21]. The Applicant respectfully disagrees with the Examiner’s use of the cited reference as a basis for rejection. The pertinent section of the cited reference is:

“By trading with Instinet and using Instinet BrokerShare as your payment facilitator, you can be assured that the brokers receiving your commission dollars will never know your positions or trading strategies. Our professional and experienced Client Services group will handle commission allocations on your behalf to the broker-dealers you choose.” BrokerShare, [www.instinet.com, October 5, 2003 (from www.archive.org); lines 31 –34]{underline added for emphasis}

BrokerShare explicitly states that the function of insuring that the brokers receiving your commission dollars will never know your positions or trading strategies is performed by a client services group. There is no disclosure, teaching, or suggestion that this function be performed by a computer process. This is patently different than the Applicant's claims where segregating payments to at least one research broker from said executing broker and preventing said research broker from receiving information related to trade execution segregating trade information from research brokers may be performed by a computer process (instant claim 1) or a process within a computer (instant claim 39).

The other Examiner cited prior art references do not address these confidentiality aspects. Thus Applicant asserts that BrokerShare is not pertinent prior art as a basis for claim rejection.

Applicant further asserts that no new material has been added.

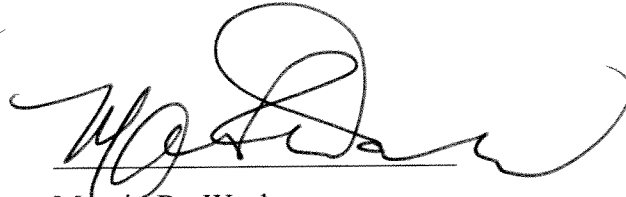

CONCLUSION TO REMARKS

Applicant asserts that this response is fully responsive to the Examiner's Office Action dated January 7, 2008. In view of the above, it is respectfully submitted that the subject matter of the pending claims is patentable over the references cited. Applicant respectfully seeks early allowance of the pending claims.

Respectfully Submitted,
